++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mainly dry. Warm or very warm in the east.

Today:
Dry with bright and sunny spells in the east and northeast. Most of the rain in the west and northwest dying out during the morning. A breezy day and very warm in any sunshine.

Tonight:
Mainly dry with the best of the clear spells in the east and northeast. Cloudier in the west, patchy light rain or drizzle possible, mostly over the hills. Breezy.

Sunday:
Another warm or very warm day in the east with sunny spells. Outbreaks of heavy rain soon moving into the west coast, the rain pushing east later. Strong coastal winds.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Heavy rain soon clearing into the North Sea on Monday, although lingering for a time over the Northern Isles. Then bright with scattered showers, although more persistent rain possible Wednesday.
